Philippines trade act endorsed

A measure that would expand U.S. trade in Asia by allowing apparel manufactured in the Philippines with U.S. fabrics to enter the country duty free was introduced Wednesday in the U.S. Senate, Sens. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii; Daniel K. Akaka, D-Hawaii; and Roy Blunt, R-Mo., announced.

The Save Our Industries Act (SAVE) has the potential to create upward of 2,000 jobs in the U.S. fabric mill sector while spurring an incentivized export market for the U.S. textile industry. With almost 99 percent of the U.S. apparel market now served by imports, U.S.

textile manufacturers are reliant on export markets for their survival.

The SAVE Act is patterned after the Dominican Republic-Central America Free Trade Agreement, or CAFTA, which permits tariff-free import of apparel assembled in those countries in return for using cotton and manmade fiber fabrics still made in the United States.

Hawaii economic outlook ranks 46th

Hawaii ranked 46th among states for the poorest economic outlook in a study released Wednesday by the American Legislative Exchange Council. The fourth edition of "Rich States, Poor States" analyzes the real effects of current policies within each state and ranks the states according to their economic growth.

The publication outlines two sets of state rankings. An economic performance ranking is based on the past 10 years of economic data and takes into consideration income, population and job growth. An economic outlook ranking uses 15 policy variables, including various tax burdens, recently legislated tax changes, regulatory burdens and labor policy.

First Wind marks Kaheawa anniversary

First Wind, a U.S.-based wind energy company, and its partner Makani Nui Associates, commemorated the five-year anniversary Wednesday of successful commercial operations of their 30 megawatt Mauibased Kaheawa Wind Power I (KWP I) project. As Maui's first utility-scale wind project, KWP I has generated nearly 563 million kilowatt-hours of clean electricity since it went online on June 22, 2006. The equivalent amount of energy from a traditional fossil fuel facility would have required more than 902,604 barrels of oil. KWP I powers approximately 11,000 homes on Maui a year — about 9 percent of the island's energy.

First Wind is currently constructing a second project, Kaheawa Wind Power II (KWP II), a 21-megawatt project adjacent to KWP I. Once KWP II is complete, the combined projects will have a capacity of 51 MW with the potential to produce enough energy for the equivalent of 20,000 Maui homes annually.
